

Unless you intend to limit what cable and satellite can broadcast in the areas of traffic and weather, then leave XM Radio alone. I pay for this service and am entitled to both traffic and weather information just as I'm entitled to The Weather Channel and CNN. With all the garbage on standard radio, including endless "host" prattle and even more endless commercials, XM Radio is a fresh breath of air. Why should I have to deal with the "garbage" just to get my traffic and weather information? If this puts a crimp in standard radio revenues - tough! They need to come up with some worthwhile programming that will EARN my desire to listen to them.
